Equality Opportunities In the work place

Equal Opportunities (EO) is with us whether we like it not. However, Equal opportunities it is not all about regulations and legislation, but also about common sense, common courtesy and, above all, being professional and appropriate at work.

To achieve this standard, it is important for staff to have knowledge of their employers EO policy. This knowledge will provide an employee what is acceptable behaviour in the work place environment.

This day's course is designed to concentrate on applying EO in the work place. Although legislation is referred to, the course explores the real effect of EO at work and how it is entwined with Diversity...

The Course Contents

Group Discussion.
Group Exercise on recognising equality.
Informative video; living with a disability.
Putting the policy into practice.
Identifying good practices.
EO working with diversity.
Anti-discriminatory practice.
Your own EO policy
Where do our values come from?
The community and cultures around us.
Religion awareness at work.
Sexual orientation.
Appropriate behaviour and speech in the work place.

Due to the vast amount of topical content it is recommended that the course be tailor made to suit the delegate.

Above is a list of subjects to be considered for inclusion. It is not possible to cover all of these subjects in one day. This can be discussed prior to the course taking place.
